Overview

When do States and the International system intervene in humanitarian crises? How are those decisions made? What are the ethical dilemmas? And if and how are humanitarian principles maintained in conflict-related crises? Is there a case for non-intervention? Traditionally, the ideal form of humanitarian interventions was about saving lives. However, as humanitarian aid has become politicized, more humanitarian spending is focused on protracted, conflict-related crises, and the closing of humanitarian space due to State and Non-State actors, the ability to maintain these principles is increasingly challenged. If and how does the humanitarian system need to change?

In this course we will cover various topics related to humanitarian interventions, including:

- Principles of humanitarian intervention
- Conflation of humanitarian aid and security policy
- Politics of (non) intervention
- Coercive humanitarianism
- Humanitarian access and security
- Critical and local perspectives on humanitarian sector
- New models of humanitarian intervention

The course will include a number of readings (more on that below) and guests who will shed light on the perspectives of various actors—states, multilaterals, implementers and recipients.¹

After this course, students will have strong knowledge of the core debates in the humanitarian field. They also will learn how to analyze the politics of future interventions, understanding the incentives and constraints on actors, and strategize how to move actors in support of intervention (or not). ²

Specialization: This course is recommended for the Global Conflict Specialization.

Please note: We will discuss difficult topics throughout the course, including issues of violence, and specifically, sexual violence.

Course Structure: This course combines lectures and discussions. There are no clear-cut answers to many of the questions we will explore in the course. My aim is to have you become more comfortable with the questions and think through how to wrestle with the dilemmas they pose and think critically about the ethical and political arguments for or against intervention.

Communication: Direct all administrative questions (e.g., finding a reading, Canvas issues, etc) to the TAs. They are very happy to help you. This also allows me to focus my time on the content of the course, grading and substantive questions.

In terms of replies, you can expect replies from me or the TAs during the hours of 8 AM to 6 PM CT. You may receive replies outside of these times. However, if you contact us after 6 PM, there is a good chance you will not receive a reply until the next day.

Assignments

Note: All written assignments are expected to be single-spaced, 12 point font, with one inch margins. Those submitted that don't follow these instructions will not be graded. I will return them to you and ask you to resubmit. In particular, if your paper is longer than requested, it is not fair to give you more space to develop your argument compared to your peers.

Regrading policy: If you do poorly on an assignment (below a B-), I will give you an opportunity to redo it; however, you will not be able to earn higher than a B on the resubmission. This option is only available for one assignment

Individual Assignments/Grades:

Participation (10%): In class, it is expected students come to discussions prepared to discuss the topic and some of the readings. This is your opportunity to engage more with the material, ask me questions, and debate the thorny issues that are at the heart of humanitarian interventions. In your professional career, you will need to back your opinions with evidence (most of the time), and so use class as an opportunity to hone those skills.

Weekly Bullets (10%): Additionally, 9 times over the term, you will need to share 2-3 bullet points on the week's reading. These are meant to be brief, so I and the rest of the teaching team see what is of interest to students and what students are wrestling with. These are due at 7 pm on Monday or Wednesday.

2 points (Strong)	Bullet points demonstrate depth of reading and thoughtfulness. There is evidence that the student read carefully, relating their points/questions to specific aspects of the course materials. The points bring together a combination of analysis, application, and integrations with other course materials.
1 point (Good)	Bullet points demonstrate familiarity with reading, with some thought about its applications, limitations, and/or integration with other course materials.
0 points (Unsatisfactory)	No submission or bullet points demonstrate superficial reading of materials (e.g., points could have been written just based on the abstract)

I encourage you to use both these opportunities for engagement. In this class, there are few, if any, straightforward answers. Wrestling with the ethical and practical issues related to humanitarian interventions will make you better professionals.

Op-Ed (20%): You will pick a current crisis and write an op-ed either for or against a government to intervene in a humanitarian disaster. The crisis may be “natural” or man-made. A strong Op-Ed is one that does the following:

- Is an issue that is currently being debated. Sending more aid to ward off a famine in Somalia would work; what the world could have or should have done in the 80s to ward off famine in Ethiopia doesn't.
- Gives the reader enough context about the situation to follow the argument. You don't have much space, so this likely is only a paragraph. But if you assume too much of your reader, they may not follow what you are saying.
- Consider the political implications both home and abroad when making your arguments. If there weren't political constraints, many humanitarian dilemmas wouldn't be dilemmas.

Even financial constraints are political to some degree (i.e., which places receive aid). There is a reason this is an issue is a debate, and you need to acknowledge it.

- Provides evidence or a basis for your argument. Humanitarian principles? Ability to save lives? Policy has worked elsewhere?

Op-Eds will be graded to the degree you do these four things.

Due: April 25th, midnight, Canvas. Submissions over 800 words will not be accepted.

Perspective-taking reflection paper (20%): In this course, we will spend considerable time discussing the politics of intervention. However, there are people who suffer while those in power decide what to do. That does not mean intervention is always the answer, but I want you to think about how these crises impact people. For this, you will pick a memoir, film/documentary, a piece of art, a poem or novel created by someone who has lived through a humanitarian crisis (I will provide some suggestions on Canvas), and reflect how that perspective changed or provided you new insight into the crisis. For the paper:

- Provide a brief overview of the crisis, including statistics on displacement, food security, injured, killed, etc, and if and how the international community intervened (no more than 1 page). Please use citations for this section (footnotes/endnotes, parenthetical citations, or hyperlinks).
- Describe how the piece influenced your thinking about the crisis. Did it change how you feel about whether the world intervened or not? How people make a choice to stay or flee? Chose to fight? The nature of suffering?

Due: May 9th, midnight. Submissions over 2 pages will not be accepted.

Group Assignments: Over the course of the term, you will work with a group of students (4) to analyze a humanitarian crisis and come up for a recommendation for a response. It should be a current crisis (there are plenty...) and you will be advising an agency (multilateral, bilateral, or INGO) one of the following: to get involved, to get involved differently, to not get involved or to pull out. For example, the Biden administration has committed to more humanitarian aid for the Tigray region of Ethiopia and announced an envoy. Will this be enough to stop the humanitarian crisis? Does the US have enough clout? Or should they foster a multi-lateral effort? If so, who should be involved?

The TA will help organize groups.

Background to the Crisis (10%): This is a brief summary of the crisis. All crises are very complicated. However, a skill—whether for briefing or proposal writing—is to succinctly describe the situation and why it matters. The summary will include the following elements: 1) What started the crisis; 2)

The humanitarian toll (stats on lives lost, food insecurity, children out of school, etc); and 3) The response by international actors to date. Due April 11th. Submissions over 2 pages will not be accepted.

Briefing Packet (25%): The packet will include a 1-page summary of the evidence and your recommendation and a clear statement of your recommendation; background on the crisis (2 pages—updated from your first assignment based on feedback); an analysis of how other actors are responding or not (2 pages); and an analysis of the political incentives and constraints on intervening (2 pages). This exercise will assess writing and analysis skills and understanding of the various issues shaping decisions on whether or not to intervene, and how. Due: May 30th. Submissions over 7 pages will not be accepted

Group Project Participation (5%): For your group project, you will evaluate your peers on their contributions to both assignments and their teamwork. Due May 30th.

Late policy: Unless arrangements are made in advance, any assignment that is late will receive 10% penalty for each day late.

Academic Integrity: All University of Chicago students are expected to uphold the highest standards of academic integrity and honesty. Among other things, this means that students shall not represent another's work as their own, use un-allowed materials during exams, or otherwise gain unfair academic advantage. All students suspected of academic dishonesty will be reported to the Harris Dean of Students for investigation and adjudication. The disciplinary process can result in sanctions up to and including suspension or expulsion from the University. In addition to disciplinary sanctions, I will impose a grade penalty of 0 on the assignment and cannot earn higher than a C in the course for students who have committed academic dishonesty. The Harris policy and procedures related to academic integrity can be found at <https://harris.uchicago.edu/gateways/current-students/policies>. The University of Chicago Policy on Academic Honesty & Plagiarism can be found at <https://studentmanual.uchicago.edu/academic-policies/academic-honesty-plagiarism/>

Use of Artificial Intelligence (Adapted from PPHA 31941, Behavioral Science and Public Policy, Spring 2024): AI tools offer valuable assistance in writing legibly, research support and idea generation. However, these tools are not substitutes for your intellectual engagement with the material. You are permitted to use AI tools as supplementary aids for refining your ideas, finding research material, and editing language to help with translation, spelling, grammar, and improving sentence flow. No more than 20% of any paragraph or assignment may be generated using AI tools.

Relying on these tools beyond this violates the principles of academic integrity described above and will be addressed as such. You are fully responsible for the content they generate. You should review and edit any generated content to avoid inaccurate information and copyright infringement.

All instances where AI tools are used must be acknowledged. When submitting an assignment in which you used an AI tool, please add a disclosure statement at the end of the assignment which:

- Names the tool(s) used
- Describe use (refining initial ideas, providing research insights, improving your writing, etc.)
- Explains how you further modified the AI-generated content
- Offers a brief reflection of how using the tool helped you learn.

Example AI Disclosure: To check how a student may use ChatGPT to complete an assignment, I prompted ChatGPT with the assignment instructions. I adjusted the assignment based on this feedback. I then asked ChatGPT to review the revised assignment and see if there were ways to make it more difficult for ChatGPT. Using ChatGPT assisted in me in crafting assignments that would require students to use their intellectual prowess and creativity.

Electronics Policy: As this is a course about evidence-informed policy, I have chosen to make an evidence-informed policy about electronics. There is now considerable evidence (see, for example, hereLinks to an external site., hereLinks to an external site., hereLinks to an external site., and hereLinks to an external site.) that the use of electronics in classrooms has adverse impacts on learning. To optimize the classroom experience, I am restricting the use of electronic screens (laptops, phones) in class, with exceptions for students with a documented Student Disability Services (SDS) accommodation. Students may use tablets that lie flat, and take notes, read PDFs, etc.

Pass/Fail Option: Students who wish to take the course pass/fail rather than for a letter grade must use the Harris Pass/Fail request form (<https://harris.uchicago.edu/form/pass-fail>) and must meet the Harris deadline, which is generally 9am on the Monday of the 5th week of courses. Students who take the course pass/fail must attend class meetings and turn in all assignments, achieving marks on assignments that are overall commensurate with at least a C- letter grade.

ADA student accommodations: The University's policies regarding students with disabilities are available here. Students who have disability accommodations awarded by the University Student Disability Services Office should inform the Harris Dean of Students office by the end of the first week of class. The Harris Dean of Students Office will work with the student and instructor to coordinate the students' accommodations implementation.

Diversity and Inclusion: The Harris School welcomes, values, and respects students, faculty, and staff from a wide range of backgrounds and experiences, and we believe that rigorous inquiry and effective public policy problem-solving requires the expression and understanding of diverse viewpoints, experiences, and traditions. The University and the Harris School have developed distinct but overlapping principles and guidelines to insure that we remain a place where difficult issues are discussed with kindness and respect for all.

- The University's policies are available here. Specifically, the University identifies the freedom of expression as being "vital to our shared goal of the pursuit of knowledge, as is the right of all members of the community to explore new ideas and learn from one another. To preserve an environment of spirited and open debate, we should all have the opportunity to contribute to intellectual exchanges and participate fully in the life of the University."
- The Harris School's commitments to lively, principled, and respectful engagement are available here: "Consistent with the University of Chicago's commitment to open discourse and free expression, Harris encourages members of the leadership, faculty, student body, and administrative staff to respect and engage with others of differing backgrounds or perspectives, even when the ideas or insights shared may be viewed as unpopular or controversial." We foster thought-provoking discourse by encouraging community members not only to speak freely about all issues but also to listen carefully and respectfully to the views of others.

Readings: This is a relatively heavy writing and reading course. However, I offer alternatives when possible—podcasts, documentaries, research summaries.

Books for the Course: There are two that I will rely on for the course. I rarely assign all of the book, but many of them are compelling reads in their own right, and are available used (for example, there are copies of Reiff's A Bed for the Night on Amazon for as low as $1.50). The books are also on reserve.

Appendix: Full Harris Academic Integrity Procedures

Harris Procedures for Allegations of Plagiarism, Cheating, and Academic Dishonesty

First Violation

If a student is accused by an instructor or teaching assistant of plagiarism, cheating, or any other form of academic dishonesty, the student will be summoned to meet with the Dean of Students and the instructor. In the meeting, the student and instructor both present information about the situation. If it is determined by the instructor and the Dean of Students that the student has, in fact, plagiarized or cheated, the following sanctions will be imposed for the first violation:

- The student will generally receive a grade of 0 on the assignment or exam in question. Please note that grading decisions are fully at the discretion of the instructor, who may decide to impose harsher grade penalties.

- The student may be asked to re-do the assignment or retake the exam (without credit) to ensure that the student has learned how to properly cite sources or demonstrate that he or she has command of material covered.
- A formal letter of finding is sent to the student stating that the student has been found in violation of the code of academic honesty and what the sanctions were. The letter, along with any evidence presented, is archived in Harris Student Affairs records until the student graduates if the student has no other violations.
- Students found in violation of the academic honesty policy are not permitted to withdraw from the course to avoid grade penalties from the instructor.
- In cases where plagiarism or academic dishonesty is egregious, the case may be referred to the Area Disciplinary Committee even on a first offense. The Dean makes all decisions about which cases will go before the Area Disciplinary Committee.

Second Violation

If a student who has already been found in violation academic dishonesty is again accused of academic dishonesty, the case will be sent to the Harris Area Disciplinary Committee. Details about the Area Disciplinary Committee procedures can be found in the University Student Manual. Information about the first violation, including the formal letter of finding any evidence, will be presented to the Area Disciplinary Committee, along with evidence of the current allegation. If the student is found in violation of academic honesty a second time, the Area Disciplinary Committee can assign sanctions including transcript notes, disciplinary probation, suspension or expulsion from the University.

Academic Dishonesty Appeals

If a student has been found in violation of academic honesty and does not believe that either the finding or the sanction is fair or correct, the student has the right to appeal the finding by requesting a hearing from the Area Disciplinary Committee. More information about the Area Disciplinary Committee is available here.
