The Civic Leadership Academy meets on Fridays, every other week for six months from January to June. Additionally, the program includes a one-week global practicum, a civic practitioner leadership series, and a civic collaboratory.

CURRICULUM

The CLA core curriculum is organized around four modules of leadership:

I. Foundations

Classes: Discovering Leadership Capacity; Defining Civic Leadership; Understanding Victimhood and the Ethics of Leadership

II. Goals

Classes: When is Change Possible?; Using Data to Advance Policy Objectives; Defining Goals in Government and Nonprofit Sectors; Recovering Goals (and Mission) During Times of Crisis

III. Strategy & Tactics

Classes: Disrupting and Keeping Power and Negotiation

IV. Communication

Classes: Commitment, Persuasion, and Active Listening; Communicating Across Difference; Performance and Storytelling

GLOBAL PRACTICUM

Fellows travel abroad to meet and learn from civic practitioners from the government and nonprofit sectors. During this week, fellows are asked to collect data on the core themes of leadership: what it is, what it isn't, and what it requires. Fellows recognize leadership challenges and strategies, and learn how to translate lessons learned to Chicago.

CIVIC PRACTITIONER LEADERSHIP SERIES

Through the monthly Civic Practitioner Leadership Series, fellows and CLA alumni learn from leading civic practitioners in Chicago. These sessions are an opportunity to explore practical applications to the themes of leadership established in the classroom.

CIVIC COLLABORATORY

In the Civic Collaboratory, fellows present and solicit the expertise of their cohort as they seek to address critical challenges their organizations face. From the first day of class, CLA fellows leverage the collective thought leadership and reach of the CLA network.

“Coalitions between nonprofit organizations and government entities are foundational for a thriving Chicago. The Civic Leadership Academy has given me the opportunity to engage with fellow leaders in the nonprofit, philanthropy, and government sectors in a meaningful and impactful way. I have deepened my understanding of the roles we have within our city, the levers we have at hand to create change, and the opportunities we have to collaborate. We have all grown as leaders and global agents of change because of CLA.”

Rosa Y. Ortiz, CLA`19

Senior Program Director, Enterprise Community Partners

“At a time when people need to think creatively about social change, the Civic Leadership Academy distills the very best of the University and the City of Chicago. While analytical in focus, CLA fosters open and honest communication across the government and nonprofit sectors. While attentive to the conceptual and theoretical underpinnings of leadership, CLA pushes scholars, civic practitioners, and the fellows themselves to think critically about practical applications. In the crowded space of leadership training initiatives, there simply is nothing like CLA.”
